Gartner bases its vendor positioning on two major elements: (1) ability to execute and (2) completeness of vision. Palo Alto Networks entered Gartner’s Magic Quadrant in 2010 as a visionary vendor based on its highly differentiated technology and rapid market adoption.

In the Dec-2011 report, Gartner has positioned Palo Alto Networks as a Leader, because of its “next-generation firewall (NGFW) design, redirection of the market along the NGFW path, consistent displacement of Leaders and Challengers, and market disruption forcing Leaders to react.”
